

See what all the buzz is about. Stack Hill's model home is open again this Sunday, March 1, from noon to 3 p.m.

Stack Hill opening attracts hundreds

Buyers were able to get a first glimpse of the Stack Hill neighborhood last Sunday with the grand opening of its brand-new, fully furnished model home. The event was an overwhelming success hosting an astounding 333 visitors in just over three hours. This is thought to be a record number of visitors for a single afternoon home opening. You would assume the real estate downturn was over if you saw the enthusiasm of this crowd.

"It's great to see people really excited about this project," says Julie McBride, who co-owns MC Construction Consultants, Inc., with her husband Mike Cohen. This stunning model reflects the craftsman era and will become Stack Hill's permanent sales office for custom home builder MC Construction. The comments were overwhelmingly positive regarding the quality, craftsmanship, style, and design of the home, according to McBride. "The house is perfect for entertaining – even with sometimes 50+ guests in the house, it never felt cramped or crowded."

Lacey-based MC Construction takes pride in the excellence of their craftsmanship and in their desire to design homes to fit their client's lifestyles as well as their budgets.

"We're completely dedicated to employing state-of-the-art materials and building methods and to providing homebuyers with exemplary service," said Mike Cohen. "For us, superior, cutting-edge construction includes a commitment to earth-sustainable practices and environmental stewardship. Every custom home we construct is dual Built Green® and ENERGY STAR® certified."

Visitors who toured the model home not only admired the craftsmanship but enjoyed the stunning view of Commencement Bay, which even included Seattle's Space Needle and the Columbia Center tower in the backdrop. Guests were also interested to hear about the exciting things happening down on the waterfront at Point Ruston, where the first waterfront condominiums are slated to open for occupancy this fall.

Visit www.MCConstruction.com or call (360) 456-6307, ext. 16.

Winner of 'Best Contractor' in The Olympian's 2006 & 2007 South Sound Awards